1. Introduction - Pfizer's Commitment to Transparency Reporting

Pfizer engages members of the public, including patients, carers, health economists and others to provide expert advice and guidance on many aspects of the work that we do. For example patients and carers are often engaged to advise on the design of our clinical trials, helping us ensure that our trials reflect the real experience of patients living with a particular disease. They also advise us on assessing the treatment outcomes that matter to patients and their carers so that we assess the efficacy and safety of our medicines in development in ways that are meaningful for the patients that they are ultimately intended for. Health Economists help us understand the economic value of the medicines that we develop and advise us on which outcomes demonstrate the greatest impact of a medicine to society and the economy. We believe that the disclosure of payments to members of the public is another important step forward in the work we are doing to ensure that the public can have confidence in the way our industry operates. Payments to members of the public are disclosed in an aggregated format to ensure that the privacy of patients, carers and other members of the public are appropriately protected.

We believe that transparency is essential to building and maintaining confidence in us and in our medicines and strongly support the work being done by The Association of the British Pharmaceutical Industry (ABPI) and The European Federation of Pharmaceutical Industries and Associations (EFPIA) to improve transparency across the pharmaceutical industry.

This methodological note presents how the transfers of value are categorized and in what format they are disclosed.
